
Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

Susan Tepper: Four Poems

Susan Tepper · Wednesday, March 25th, 2020

Alpine Nuts

Don't miss me
too much

reaching inside
the broom closet
to wipe up the mess

Mop's not there—
where
no cleaning powder
either

No soft presence
lingering from my shampoo

The one you said was Alpine nuts
good enough to eat

snuggling your nose
in my tangles.

*

Write it blank

you instruct me
in matters
of blood and rust

there is that
around the drain
you feel menaced by—

only rust—
I keep telling you.

*

Despite

you wake up
don't feel rain cutting holes in your face
notice the pillow
is blackened from night is stiff, a smoking gun.
All that's gone wrong
measures sleep in numbers
—violence has answers
despite, you say.

*

The last balcony— and bells you kept climbing
velvet stairs, the handrail soft from entrails
roping the distance:
stretch of fields
a full-blown womb
almost overnight,
pale sun, snake eyes,
girls emerging out of women breaking open
the long silent history.

(Featured Photo by Laura Bruno)

This entry was posted on Wednesday, March 25th, 2020 at 9:21 am and is filed under Poetry.
You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. You can skip to the end and leave a response. Pinging is currently not allowed.