

Cultural Daily

Independent Voices, New Perspectives

The Future Of Traditional Casinos

Our Friends · Friday, February 28th, 2020

The casino has been an omnipresent piece of society since well before any of us alive today could remember. Far from it in fact, with the first officially recognised casino originating in Venice sometime during the 17th century. And you know what else? There is a very real possibility that more illegitimate casinos were around well before this, probably even in the Roman Empire!

There is no arguing with the casino's presence, almost every single human being has at least wanted to go to one of these places, and nowadays pretty much everyone can from the comfort of their own sofa or bed. That's right; online casino's arrival has made it incredibly easy to gamble, but unfortunately this has come at the expense of traditional land-based casinos. They offer a lot of freebies, such as King Casino bonus. What is their future?

Super Casinos

Now, one area of casino which is pretty much untouchable due to its immense scale and grandeur is the super casinos that can be found in places such as Las Vegas or Macau. As good as online casino has become there is just no beating these incredibly impressive places – where else can contain a hotel, zoo, theatre and absolutely huge casino all at once?

It is for this very reason that we cannot really see super casinos dying out as a result of the online craze any time soon. They are just too impressive, and going to one represents something akin to a football match or theatre show. The future of traditional casinos may well lie with a select few super variants, but only time will tell...

Live Online Casino Games

So, traditional casinos are most likely going to become fewer over the years, with only the super casinos being able to survive in the same capacity as they do today. But what does this mean for the hundreds of thousands of smaller casinos located all across the world, how will this sector of the industry react with the seemingly exponential dominance of online casino?

Well, you know the saying – if you can't beat them, join them. You can expect to see a lot more small traditional casinos start to repurpose the space as a live online casino, closing their doors and employing webcams to draw customers. We hope this will happen, but these buildings could also very well be sold off altogether, it would be a sad moment in the history of casino for sure.

Virtual Reality

Many observers would say that traditional casinos really met their end when technology got good enough for online casino to be a readily available option for gamblers worldwide. And you cannot really argue with that, if it was not for mobile technology, for instance, there might still be a bigger market of gamblers who go to actual casinos.

This is not the case, however, but don't be surprised if you see your favourite traditional casinos recreated online with the help of genuinely good virtual reality. We cannot wait for this to start happening, as it will mean you can go to some of the best casinos in the world from the comfort of your own home.

Photo:  Joshua Sortino

This entry was posted on Friday, February 28th, 2020 at 10:19 am and is filed under Lifestyle, Sponsored

You can follow any responses to this entry through the Comments \(RSS\) feed. Both comments and pings are currently closed.