When It's All About the Passion

Ann Haskins · Wednesday, March 9th, 2022

Bernstein & Bach trade off downtown, a contemporary ballet triptych in Costa Mesa, indoor/outdoor dance in El Sereno, an unlikely pairing in Culver City, art-related performances in Westwood; ballet-danced film scores, stars dancing around SoCal, all live, plus a peek at next week and more SoCal dance.

Live Dance

Yes, it's a big deal

Germany's master storyteller John Neumeier and his celebrated Hamburg Ballet arrive for three weeks of performances, some with the LA Opera and some on their own. Presented as part of the Music Center's dance series with a live orchestra, Bernstein Dances offers familiar and less familiar music from composer Leonard Bernstein's hits like Westside Story and Candide while considering how the music reflects the composer's life and charisma. With the LA Opera, more than 40 Hamburg Ballet dancers tackle J.S. Bach's St. Matthew Passion with music director James Conlon conducting the singers and orchestra. Both at Music Center Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, 135 N. Grand Ave., downtown; Bernstein Dances-Fri., March 11, 7:30pm, Sun., March 13, 2pm, Sat., March 19, 7:30pm, $39-$138. Music Center. St. Matthew Passion – Sat., March 12, 7:30pm, Thurs, March 17, 7:30pm, Sun., March 20 & 27, 2pm, Sat., March 26, 7:30pm, $23-$292. LA Opera.

No such thing as too much Leonard Bernstein

The mixed bill program ABT Forward from American Ballet Theatre has something for everyone. Fans of crooner Tony Bennett can look forward to choreographer Jessica Lang's Zig Zag set to Bennett recordings including a duet with Lady Gaga. For classical buffs, choreographer Alexei Ratmansky draws on Leonard Bernstein for Bernstein in a Bubble with the composer's Divertimento performed live by the Pacific Symphony. For jazz enthusiasts, a commissioned score from jazz pianist Jason Moran backs Single Eye a new work from choreographer Alonzo King of San Francisco's Lines Ballet. At Segerstrom Center for the Arts, 600 Town Center Dr., Costa Mesa; Wed.-Fri., March 16-18, 7:30pm, Sat., March 19, 2 & 7:30pm, $39-$129. SCFTA.

Looking every which way

For Forward Looking Back, their first live performance in two years, choreographer Rebecca Lemme and her troupe Acts of Matter offer three performances combining live dance and film to consider the new normal as public life emerges with the pandemic subsiding. Ticket holders are encouraged to dress warmly with shoes for standing as the dancing begins outside before heading inside for the rest of the evening at the Stomping Ground LA, Fri.-Sun., March 11-13, 8pm, $20, $15 students & seniors; $25 at door. What brought them together

He is Inksap, 20-something street artist and the son of Vietnamese refugees. She is Linda Lack, a figure in L.A. dance scene since making a mark in the 1980s with her uncanny ability to morph into fantastical creatures and who, in her 70's, remains rubber band flexible. This unlikely pair share the celluloid in Stuart C. Paul's 70-minute documentary Ink & Linda, exploring their collaboration and friendship along with generational perspectives on being an artist in today's world. Under the banner The Chance to Paint Each Other Gold, the film, the accompanying art exhibition, and live performances by Lack and Inksap throughout March operate as a prelude to Dance Camera West's 20th anniversary film festival which launches with the documentary's final screening. At Helms Design Center, Studio A, 8745 Washington Blvd., Culver City; Fri., March 11, Sat., March 12, Sun., March 13, Thurs., March 24, all day, free with ticket at Helms Bakery.

Taking a flyer

Several performance components are included in the current exhibit Lives where more than 50 individuals from a variety of fields contributed to consideration of interdisciplinary art making. Described as “employing voice and a body in flight,” color a body who flees brings together Holland Andres, Elaine Carberry, Jessika Kenney & Andros Zins-Brown. At UCLA Hammer Museum, 10899 Wilshire Blvd., Westwood; Tues. March 15, 7pm, free. Hammer Museum.

What's the question?

Provocatively asking what happens when the human body is stripped of all the digital input absorbed over time and “restored to its factory settings,” performers Varinia Canto Vila from Chile and LA’s own Meg Stuart offer a week-long performance of Confirm Humanity. Described as a “solo for two dancers,” the duo move among the “folds” during the hour-long sequence in the current exhibit Lifes. The exhibit is a curatorial assemblage from more than 50 artistic contributors with a line-up of related events and gallery performances. Details and covid protocols at the website. At UCLA Hammer Museum, 10899 Wilshire Blvd., Westwood; Tues.-Sun., March 8-13, free. Hammer Museum.
